Getting Your Fruit To Market

T took over half a billion pounds of ice costing over a million and a half dollars to cool 25,713 refrigerator carloads by one transportation agency in the huge task of moving the perishable fruits and vegetables of Florida alone, in the 1920-21 season, to the consuming markets of the North and East. Huge new ice manufacturing plants have recently been built at Jackson-ville, Miami, Haines City and Lakeland, Florida, in order to insure a sufficient and regular supply of ice for the cars. T took over half a billion pounds

This is in addition to the move-This is in addition to the move-ment of 10,000 cars of Georgia peaches and other thousands of cars of small fruits and vegetables in feed cars from the Carolinas and Virginia, where large modern icing plants have been constructed.

These figures will be startling to the thousands of fruit and vege-table growers of the South who bave not been informed as to the actual workings of the great new adjunct to the transportation indus-try that is fast increasing the wealth of the Southern States.

A mass of conflicting information end fragmentary figures was re-ently submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washing-on in connection with the application of the Florida Railroad Commissioners for a reduction in refrigeration charges, and in the near future the effort will be made by the transportation companies to farow the spot light on the actual operations and all the costs involved in protecting the products of Southern full and verteballs growers. ern fruit and vegetable growers surrers.

Certain of their officials state that the public lacks reliable information of what it actually means to take an orange, a head of cabbage or lettuce, a bunch of celery a grape fruit or a box of strawberries from the warm Southern climate to the table of the Northern consumer in fresh and edible condition as though grown in his own back yard. They want that information to be athered by an official body so that the farmer who raises and ships his erop and the man in New York, who mys the fruits and out of season vegetables, once looked upon as lux-uries, may know whether they are paying fair charges for refrigeracorroute to market, and whether transportation companies can proper service on the charges

Do It Now!

So many coal consumers have delayed putting in their Winter coal this season that there will be an urgent demand when the weather gets cold which will make it impossible for the mines to produce, the railroads to haui or the dealer to handle all orders as satisfactorily as the trade will want.

It is our advice to all consumers to enter their order now and have their coal put in as promptly as possible.
